

TEXAS NEEDS G.O.P. SAYS J. ADAM BEDE

J. ADAM BEDE, former congressman from Minnesota, speaking for the Grand Old Party in Cleveland Tuesday night, told the El Pasoans that the election of November 3 was over and advised them to quit talking about what was going to take place on this date and stick to what the Republicans were going to do after March 4. He predicted an overwhelming majority for Senator Harding, declaring a political tide was coming.

"It is not a matter of who is going to win," he said, "but it is a matter of majority only."

"It isn't a matter of Republicans against Democrats, or Cox against Harding, but a matter of the voters against Wilsonism and the American people against what has been done in Washington for the last four years."

The speaker declared he was not going to say anything against the Democrats because they haven't been in power in four years. Mr. Wilson has been in power, he said, and there is no doubt that he wouldn't say anything against the president, adding, "The Democrats will have enough against him on November 3."

WEDGE DRIVE IS DEMOCRATS' CAMPAIGN PLAN

French and possibly translated into English.

Used French Copy.

The copy which Senator Spencer saw was obtained from French sources, and the existence of the American version was unknown until Fred Carson, of Chicago, an American stenographer, told that he had taken the proceedings in shorthand and was forwarding a copy to the White House. The discrepancy appears to be between a specific promise of American military aid to Romania and the sending of a fleet to Europe as reported by Senator Spencer as a general promise. Had it been known that he had taken a copy to the White House, it would have been a serious matter. It is practically the same thing as Senator Keene included in his famous paragraph V in the introduction he wrote as a substitute for the league of nations.

But the issuance of the documents shows that president Wilson was in frequent cable communication with former president Taft during the peace conference, and is plainly intended by the Democrats and by the president himself as a refutation of the oft-repeated charge that he never counseled anybody or that he wanted the pact ratified without the crossing of a "Y" or the dotting of an "i," exactly as he wrote it.

Letters From Hoover.

The White House has plenty of letters from Herbert Hoover, too, which it published. He is in an embarrassing position before the country. The fact of the matter is that while the Democratic strategy may not cause Republicans to depart from Harding in sufficient numbers to begin to build a record for the future as that even if they lose the present campaign they will be in better shape in 1922 and 1923 than the congressional and presidential years, respectively.

There are Democrats who believe, for instance, that the question of how much of a hard America shall take in European affairs shall continue to be an issue for the next five years or perhaps longer. As long, indeed, as Europe owes America tax billions of dollars and as long as the reduction of taxes in America depends on how much payment can be extracted from a stabilized and peaceful Europe. The president is going out of office but he has begun in the last week a fight before the jury of American public opinion not merely for vindication but for the sake of his heart. His present effort is to draw to his side Republicans who favor the league, from helping Harding—that's the Democratic strategy. Copyright, 1922, by David Lawrence.

Organization of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"Stating facts in detail" is the purpose of his speaking tour, he said. "And I want to tell you that Texas ought to get on the 'right side,' as he declared. Texas needs the Republican party more than the Democrats need Texas."

Mr. Bede was introduced by James G. McNary, president of the First National bank, and the Republican candidate for county treasurer. Mr. McNary also read the list of other Republican candidates for county office and urged everybody who hadn't said their vote to do so before October 27.

Will Debate With Jones.

Mr. Bede left El Paso Tuesday morning for Deming, N. M., where he is scheduled to debate with Senator A. A. Jones of that state. The debate will be held this afternoon. The former congressman will speak in Harlingen, Ariz., Wednesday, in Globe, Thursday, in Miami, Friday, and in Phoenix, Saturday.

A delegation of Republicans met Mr. Bede at the station, and many called at Hotel Paso del Norte to visit with him during the afternoon, at an informal reception.

Among the hundreds of persons who shook Mr. Bede's hands and congratulated him on his address Monday night, were several Democrats. Some of them jokingly asked permission of the Republican campaign committee to shake hands with him.
